

Nursery Home Learning Suggestions

Week beginning 19/5/20

Tuesday

Stacey's Literacy activity:

Secret letters; Using a crayon and the same colour of paper as your crayon make marks or write your name. Brush over the top with watery paint or food colouring and water to reveal the hidden marks.

Emma's Numeracy activity:

Number skills through technology: Many of your mums and dads have been asking for some fun online learning games. Topmarks is one of our favourites to use on the Smartboard at nursery. There are lots of fun number games to develop counting, number recognition, sorting, matching and sequencing. They are PC and mobile device friendly too. Have a go and let us know how you get on.

Jill's Health and Wellbeing activity:

Washing Up: We have been talking lots about washing our hands but what about doing a different type of washing? You could give your toys a bath or wash your bike? You might even be able to help with the dishes or washing the car?

Wednesday

Leah's Literacy activity: Loving Letters

Things are still a bit different at the moment. We are all missing our family and friends. Think about someone you haven't seen for a little while. You could write them a letter or draw a picture of what you would like to do the next time you see them. Can you write any words to label your picture? Maybe your name or theirs? You could post it to them or get a grown up to take a photo and send them it.

Susan's Numeracy activity:

Can you count how many rooms you have in your house? Think about bedrooms, the bathroom, the kitchen etc. Which room is the biggest? Which room is the smallest? Can you count the windows from outside?

Fiona L's Health and Wellbeing activity:

Think about something that makes you happy. Can you draw a picture of it or make it out of junk? You could paint it on a stone and place it somewhere on your daily walk or show it to someone at home to make other people happy too.

Thursday

Carol's Literacy activity:

On a piece of circle paper can you write the letters of the alphabet, or ask someone to help you. Cut in between each letter but be careful not to cut all the way to the middle. Next look around your house or on your walk for things beginning with each letter. When you find something fold that letter down. Work as a team to see how many you can find.

Kay's Numeracy activity:

Put some water in a basin or the sink. Find some objects from around your house or garden, maybe a stone, toy car or a coin. You can choose as many things as you like. Have a think about whether each item will float or sink and make a note of it. Next test each item in the water, did you get it right or did it surprise you? How many did you predict right?

Katie's Health and Wellbeing activity

Make a picture of something you have enjoyed doing whilst spending time together at home. You don't need to use pencils or crayons, if you would prefer you could use sticks or leaves from the ground on your daily walk. You could make more than one picture or each person in your family could make one to create a memory book of the special time you have spent together.
